Preface

This book was written in full by an amazing group of people who all use PRC devices as their main mode of communication. Each has a distinct personality which will be reflected in the variety of ideas provided. This project began when PRC hired this group to 'produce' materials for the company. They were recommended according to their communicative abilities and desire to help others. When talking about what would have been useful for them to learn during their many years of therapy, this project was suggested as the most needed. Much time was spent on vocabulary and usage but, not necessarily the practical use of such vocabulary or the pragmatics of effective communication. I have to say that I thoroughly enjoyed the sessions of putting the ideas down in print. There was much laughter as well as a serious realization as to how important it is to teach someone to effectively use their voice. I learned that all of 'The Producers' have an overwhelming desire to be listened to and understood. We hope that this book will open such doors in your work as well.

Please enjoy the work, share it with others and most importantly...Let's get talking!!!

How to Use this Book

From Hayden Corn

To the teachers and speech-language pathologists:
This book is for you to help your student become faster with their communication device. We hope this will be a great help to the student. The way I would use this book is:

1. I would practice, and practice, and practice in the classroom.
2. Next I would role play with the student.
3. Finally, I would try it out in the community.

From Jimmy Rodriguez

This book is meant to show people what we can do with our communication device. We are the same like everybody else but, we can't talk. This book is good for whoever doesn't know about the communication device. They might understand more. The book is to give you better ideas. We hope this book will help you. You should try calling a place with whoever is using the communication device. You shouldn't use 'yes' and 'no' questions. You want them to practice making sentences.
